A DEFENSE OF PRETTY WOMEN.—After all, is the world so very absurd in its love of pretty women? Is woman so ridiculous in her chase after beauty? A pretty woman is doing a woman's work in the world, not making speeches nor making puddings, but making life sunnier and more beautiful. Man has foregone the pursuit of beauty altogether. Does he seek it for himself, he is guessed to be frivolous, he is guessed to be poetic; there are whispers that his morals are no better than they should be. In a society resolute to be ugly, there is no post for an Adonis, but that of a model or guard-man. But woman does for mankind what man has ceased to do. Her aim from very childhood is to be beautiful. Even as the school-girl she notes the progress of her charms, the deepening color of her hair, the growing symmetry of her arm, the ripening color of her cheek. We watch with silent interest, the mysterious reveries of the maiden; she is dreaming of a coming beauty, and panting for the glories of eighteen. Inseparably, she becomes an artist, her room a studio, her glass an academy. The joy of her toilet is the joy of Raphael over his canvas or Michael Angelo over his marble. She is creating beauty in the silence and loneliness of her chamber; she grows like an art-creation, the results of patience, of hope, of a thousand delicate touchings and re-touchings. Woman is never perfect; never complete. A restless night undoes the beauty of the day; sunshine blurs the avancement coloring of her cheeks; frost nips the tender outlines of her face harshness. Care plows the lines across her brow; motherhood destroys the elastic lightness of her form, the bloom of her cheek, the quick flash of her eye fades and vanishes as the years go by. But woman is still true to her ideal. She won't know when she is beaten, and she manages to steal fresh victories in her defeat. She invents new conceptions of womanly grace, she rallies at forty, and fronts us with the beauty of womanhood; she makes a last stand at sixty, with the beauty of old age. She falls like Caesar, wrapping her mantle around her—"buried in woolen 'twould a saint provoke!" Death listens pitifully to the longings of a lifetime, and the wrinkle face smiles with something of the prettiness of eighteen. —[Saturday Review.]

FEMINE AMENITIES.—If women, perhaps better than men, know how to do things insolent to each other, so do they know how to resent impertinences. An American lady traveling in Switzerland tells this dinner-table story: "I had seen enough of traveling English, of whom the party at the table was largely composed, to know how to greet them; so I entirely ignored their presence, placidly gazing out of the window in the interval of the courses, on long, straggling St. Gotharhausen opposite. This had its effect in the increased respect of all places, except those from a pair of bold, black eyes opposite me, whose owner observed to her husband, in a loud tone, 'One of the people of the country, I suppose.' My dear, murmured the gentleman, 'take care; the lady may understand English.' 'Not likely!' in a tone of innocent disdain. 'Oh! ah! one can never be too careful. So many of our people go to Paris, don't you know, that the French must pick up a little of our lingo.' 'I don't think her French,' remarked the lady, her gaze still broadly fixed on me. She proceeded with some very free and impudent remarks. At the conclusion of the meal I wanted some confections that stood near this lady, and the waiters had all left the room. I looked directly at her, and said in my best English, 'Madame, may I trouble you to hand me those bon-bons?' 'If you could have seen that woman's face!' It turned white, her jaw dropped, and she stared blankly, utterly unable to comply with my request. My husband snatched up the plate and handed it to me with a bow, and I ate my confectionery with an innocent air, in the midst of a dead silence.

DANGEROUSLY ILL.—We regret to learn that the condition of Hon. George M. Morrison, member elect to the Assembly from this county, is to-day extremely critical. He is afflicted with neuralgia in the head, and from the symptoms to-day it is doubtful if he will recover. —[Virg. Chronicle, 6th.]

Ex-Lieutenant Governor James S. Slingerland, we regret to state, has again been attacked with inflammatory rheumatism, from which he has been confined to his bed for two or three days past. —[Common Register.]

An inquiring man thrust his fingers into a horse's mouth to see how many teeth he had. The horse closed his mouth to see how many fingers the man had. The curiosity of each was fully satisfied.

If you court a young woman, and you are won and she is won, you will both be one.
